The attention of our readers is called to the valuable information contained in this week's issue—the comparison of the McKinley and New Tariffs. The text of the Income Tax will be in our next issue. Cut out the columns containing this important matter and save for reference.

THERE will be a big Confederate Barbecue given at Hawesville on Saturday, Sept. 8, for the benefit of the Monument Fund. All old soldiers both Confederate and Union and everybody else are cordially invited to attend. The management promises a magnificent time. The invitation to Ohio county is "Come over and feast."

MR. CLEVELAND has written a letter purporting to tell why he allows the product of "perfidy and dishonor" to become a law without his signature. It is a very tame explanation. The world and his party would have been far better impressed with his reputed backlance had he done what his previous utterances had indicated he would do—veto the bill. Grover is fishing for another Presidential nomination.

LAST Sunday night at Lexington the Rev. Barnes, the evangelist, shocked the feelings of the moral and christian world by coming boldly out in a sermon and endorsing Breckinridge for Congress. The reputation he has heretofore borne as a christian minister not only adds to the insult to the good people of the State but to the cause he espouses. No man has a right to subject the religion of Jesus Christ and the gospel ministry to the slurs and insults and contempt which just such utterances as those of the Rev. Mr. Barnes bring upon them. What respect is a man of the world calculated to have for a cause however lofty, but which is represented by men of ability and reputation who go about the country asking that a moral leper and self-confessed libertine be given the highest recognition. Barnes deserves as he receives the universal condemnation of right thinking people.

HOW MONTGOMERY REWARDS HIS ENEMIES.

During the late Montgomery-Murray canvass for the Democratic nomination in this Congressional District some good men in his party in Hardin county chose to oppose Mr. Montgomery's re-nomination, among the number was Dr. J. H. Ashlock, of Summit, who has long been a member of the Pension Examining Board, of Elizabethtown, who enjoys the reputation of being one of the finest examiners in the State and holds the confidence of the old soldiers of that locality as Dr. Pendleton does in Ohio county, but Dr. Ashlock no longer meets with the board at Elizabethtown. As soon as Mr. Montgomery returned to Washington from his canvass, Dr. Ashlock was notified by the Pension Department that his services could be dispensed with, and his place was supplied by one of Montgomery's henchmen without regard to qualifications or sympathy for the old soldiers. As a small, narrow-minded manipulator of the machine, Montgomery is away up head, but when it comes to filling the chair of a statesman he enjoys about as much room as a bumble-bee does in a sugar hogshead.

Don't buy a blood purifier because it is "cheap." The best—the Superior Medicine—Ayer's Sarsaparilla, is, in the end, the cheapest blood purifier in the market. The ingredients of which it is composed are the most expensive and medicinally efficacious that can be obtained.

HARDINSBURG.

PICNICS ABOUT PLAYED OUT.

Robin Hood Scores the Wilson Bill, and Gives Some Good Points to Teachers.

A VERY INTERESTING LETTER.

HARDINSBURG, Ky., Aug. 26.
The prevailing hard times have had a disastrous effect on the picnic business in this county this year. There have been several and most of them have resulted in a loss to the proprietors. They have as a general thing been pretty well attended, but owing to the scarcity of "filthy lucre" the young bloods of the county have not been able to figure in the dashing manner, in which they have figured in the years that have passed. Their pocket-books are not overflowing, in fact they are empty. As a result pink lemonade and pop corn boxes, not to speak of striped peppermint candy, remain on the shelf, there being no sale for the same. Those of our fellow-citizens who engage in the picnic business, will, therefore in all probabilities cast their vote against the Democratic party. The picnic business heretofore has been a paying one. If therefore during the first year of the Democratic Administration, the bottom drops out of it, picnic managers are going to lay the cause of it to Democratic "perfidy and dishonor." When the Democratic party aud prosperity of the people, and so shapes legislation that our country swains cannot buy their sweethearts a sack of peanuts or a banana—when such a state of affairs exist, there is going to be a mighty political revolution. The picnic custom must be preserved. When it ceases, the Fourth of July orators will have no opportunity to launch out into strains of thrilling and patriotic eloquence. The county candidates will not have the pleasure of showing the people how they love them and that they would die for them if it became necessary that they should die. In short when picnics cease to be, life will become a burden and there will be no further inducement for mankind to live. The Democratic party has well nigh struck a death blow to picnics. It must and will be rebuked for this at the polls.

It is often said that the meanest man is he who permits a newspaper to be sent to his address and then refuses to pay his subscription. He is not any meaner, however, than the man who has not an earthly thing to do but yet thinks he will be everlasting ruined if he steps into a barber shop where several are waiting and cannot be shaved first. Such a man I think is equally as mean as the other fellow and by far the bigger fool.

There is Mr. Wilson—Mr. Wilson, the Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, who framed the Wilson Tariff Bill. Our sincerest sympathies are extended to Mr. Wilson. With the greatest care and after Herculean labor he presented to the public his revised tariff laws, over which the Democratic press at once went into spasms of ecstatic praise. Immediately after his assiduous toil or perhaps while engaged in it, a burning fever laid hold of his exhausted frame and for weeks he lay racked with pain. Skillful medical assistance, together with the climate of Mexico, to which he had repaired to recuperate his exhausted energies, restored him to health. He returned to his colleagues in Congress and received their overwhelming congratulations upon his recovery. But his re-entry into public life only brought down on his devoted head another storm of misery. This time it came in the shape of mental anguish. His very soul was tortured in a manner that words cannot describe. He came home to see the bill, as dear to him as life, jumped upon by the remorseless and unfeeling Senate, which twisted, changed, and contorted it, until it was entirely beyond recognition. It would seem that at this point his cup of sorrow was filled to its fullest. But not so. He was doomed to see it filled to overflowing. The Senate said it must be their bill or no bill, notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Wilson was bathed in tears, and that Mr. Cleveland had said it was perfidious and dishonorable. Mr. Wilson was forced to swallow the Senate Bill. This was the consummation of his sorrows. There was nothing left for Mr. Wilson but to mourn over the broken promises and pledges of his party. Mr. Wilson surely presents to the public a lamentable scene. But all is not lost, Mr. Wilson. The poet has said: "Be still sad heart and cease repining. Behind the clouds is the sun still shining; Thy fate is the common fate of all, For into each life some rain must fall; Some days must be dark and dreary."

The Breckinridge County Teachers Institute convened here last week and was conducted by Prof. Logan, of Cloverport. A few general remarks about the Institute at this place may not be amiss. In the first place there is always grumbling on the part of teachers to a greater or less extent, because they are forced by law to attend the Institute. The principal cause of this discontent is found in the fact that a large number of teachers are in the business temporarily. They teach until they can find something else to do. A person who intends to make teaching his profession and always does what he can to make the same interesting. If he is assigned work, he will prepare it the best he can. Those who teach temporarily, however, often fail to do the work assigned them because of indifference to the cause of teaching. This of course will cause confusion and delay in the execution of the program. As a result those who do take part in the proceedings together with the conductor do all the taking. This makes the Institute monotonous. And if it were not for music which is often furnished by outside parties the Institute would be an exceedingly dry affair. This state of affairs ought not to exist. The Institute can be made just what the teachers want it to be. If they wish it to be lively and animated they can make it so. A great deal depends on the Superintendent, to be sure, but not all by any means. With the teachers properly interested and resolved to do their best the Institute can be made interesting and instructive. And as long as they are compelled to attend, it is to their interest to make the best of it. At the Institute last week fully two-thirds of the teachers failed to discuss the topics assigned them and as a result the conductor was forced to discuss them all. Some few teachers helped him out, but they did not enter into the spirit of the work as they should have done. It is getting time that everyone in the least connected with the common school system should get his eyes open and wide open at that. Our free school system has enemies within and without. It constitutes the bulwark of American liberty, and a blow at it is a stab to our boasted freedom. Any infringement on its domain, therefore, should be viewed with a jealous eye. But with teachers indifferent and inefficient, the enemies of the common school system can argue, and successfully, that common schools are not what they should be. Greater interest and activity, therefore, should be manifested by common school teachers in order that they do not discredit their profession, and injure the cause of common schools. ROBIN HOOD.

THE HAYRIDE.

One of the Most Pleasant Occasions of the Season.

Sulphur Springs the Destination and an All-around Success.

UNUSUALLY NOVEL INVITATION.

One of the crowning social events of the season was given August 10, by some of Hartford's merriest and most charming society home girls and visitors. The invitations were issued in a most unique style, each one being in rhyme, tied with a bunch of hay. These were placed on a rustic tray and sent to Carson & Co's. store for distribution among the fortunate gentlemen. Certainly our town can show more talent in this line than was known before this delightful event. The young man entered into a high glee, and the sport, as it may well be termed, of answering these invitations can more easily be imagined than described. Nor am I able to portray the anxiety and curiosity of the young ladies while awaiting the arrival of the replies. These important missives, I have been fortunate enough to have a collection of. Mrs. Lou Walker's invitation as chapman ran thus:

"When the evening shades begin to play,
Over the hills, we'll lie away,
At Sulphur Springs we intend to land,
So come along and join the band."

Mrs. Walker sent the following appropriate reply:

"Your note this moment came to hand,
That you want a chaperon I understand,
And if the evening shades be fine,
You'll find me ready and on time."

The young ladies left Dr. Alexander's at 6 o'clock p. m., one picking the guitar and the rest joining in the song, (which by the way, was composed by them for the occasion, with the exception of the chorus) which was, "We are all as happy as a big Sunflower."

The wagon was bedecked with sunflowers and each member of the fine ton-horse team was dignified with sunflowers at their heads and around their collars. Each of these merry-hearted girls wore one in her hair, one in her belt, and carried one for her escort. This bright collection of appropriately styled sunflowers drew rein at Carson & Co's. store, where the gentlemen joined the happy crowd, and Mr. James Hudson drove his gala troupe triumphantly through the streets and reached the Springs about 9:30 o'clock in high glee and as hungry as picnickers usually are. The young ladies had provided an ample lunch, consisting of all the good things incident to such occasions, which after adjusting their toilets, they spread for their guests, who did ample justice to the substantial as well as the cake and sherbert, of which they had a big supply. The delightful repast served to wear off the fatigue of the long drive, and they spent the remainder of the evening dancing, which was greatly enjoyed, as time was short.

At 11 o'clock "Home, sweet home," was sung by the merry crowd and Mr. Hudson found his wagon load of human freight ready to start, and true to his trust, he landed them safely at their homes, which they reached as jolly as when they started.

Dr. White hour would you like,
To go to the Springs to-morrow night?
Mr. Carson what would you say,
To going to the Springs on a load of hay?

If you go, don't your best frock,
For we make our start at 6 o'clock
Mr. R. T. Collins on a hayride, we will go,
And you must be our devoted beau.

So to prevent a jealous squall,
Put your hand on your heart,
And swear you love us all.

Mr. J. H. Williams, at the setting of the sun,
We start out in search of fun,
And as we expect to be out rather late,
You must keep your tongue rattling at a 2-40 gait.

M. Bean, please don't be mean,
And say with this crowd you'll not be seen,
But be at the gate and ready to start,
For in this picnic you must take part.

Mr. Duke if the weather is clear,
To-morrow evening won't find us here
And if you will go with us under the trees
You may eat and drink as much as you please.

Mr. Hardwick, if this town you would like to leave,
Come and join us on to-morrow eve,
For in the moon-light we are going to bank,
And to talk and be gay will be your task.

Mr. Carson we are going to-morrow,
To leave behind all care and sorrow,
And if you wish to be forever famous
Oh, come and go with us, Mr. Amos.

If you'll go along to-morrow night,
A picnic we intend this to be,
And we'll be miserable without thee.
The following young ladies composed the crowd: Misses Eva and Bessie Morton, Mary and Ella Cox, Carolyn and Margaret Harbour, Elizabeth Calloway and Emma Hayslett.

THE CHILD-POET.

Little People and Their Beautiful Gift of Imagination.

Helen and the Dandelion.—The Leaves Called Her to Join in the Apple Tree.—The Vestibule of Heaven.—Morning—God's Pretty Sky.

Children have the poet's gift of personification. Their vivid imagination endows everything with life, and they make companions of bird and tree, bush and flower.

A little girl was walking with her mother one day when they saw in the grass the first dandelion of spring. "Run, pick it," said the mother. The child ran, but presently came back without it. "Where is the dandelion?" asked the mother. "Oh," answered the child, "it looked right at me and said: 'Please, little Helen, don't pick me. I want to stay right here.' So I didn't pick it." To her little sensitive heart the impression was just as real as if the flower had actually spoken the words.

A little fresh-air child who was seeing the country for the first time, would throw herself upon the grass, face downward, and fiddle and talk to each separate blade as she lay there, and the sight of a growing flower would throw her into an ecstasy of delight. One morning she came striding down as soon as it was light. "Why didn't you sleep, Bertha?" called the house mother as she heard the child coming down. "The leaves talked to me and I couldn't," answered Bertha, looking with eager eyes toward the open door.

A little boy stood with hushed breath and parted lips, listening eagerly to the twitter of a robin in the apple tree.

"Don't make a noise," he softly said. "Birdie is telling a story to the apple-flowers."

A little girl was watching a gorgeous sunset, when with awe-struck face she exclaimed:

"O mamma, God has opened His door and I can see right into heaven!"

She did not know that some poet before her had likened the flaming clouds to the "vestibule of heaven."

A six-year-old boy was watching the fire-works on a Fourth of July evening. The full moon had just arisen, and to more than one observer the sharp contrast between God's work and man's was made strikingly apparent; but to Ernest the contrast was more than he could bear. Suddenly he exclaimed:

"Auntie, I shouldn't think God would like to have his pretty sky spoiled with smoke."

To this poet-soul the whizzing rockets and wheels and Roman candles were as nothing in comparison with "God's pretty sky."—Harriet A. Farrand, in Chautauquan.

GROWTH OF NEW WORDS.
How They Are Gradually Adopted Into Every-Day Language.
The growth of new words in our existing languages is the safest guide to the origin of language in general. Such new words are continually arising from day to day in our midst.
Just at first they are usually imitative or onomatopoeic and more or less inartificial. They are deficient in vowels. The steam engine seems to say to us: "Puff, puff, puff," the cat seems to say to us: "Purr, purr, purr," the sound of a cannon being as it strikes the ground we represent by "Bang," the sound of a gun we represent by "Bang." But when we come to use those sounds familiarly as part of language we soon grow to vocalize them. We say puff, puff, puff; purr, purr, purr. In proportion as we use such words in composition do they become more and more articulate and less and less onomatopoeic, while at the same time they tend to become widened and conventionalized in meaning. At last when we talk of whizzing wheels, of a banging door, of giving a friend a puff in the papers or of dexterously booming a new invention we have almost lost sight of onomatopoeia altogether. Even when we remark that the cat purrs or that we distinctly heard a loud thud at a distance we are scarcely conscious of imitative intention.—Longman's Magazine.

HODGENVILLE.

The Hon. John W. Lewis Speaks to a Large Crowd at the La-Rue Capital.

Montgomery Attempts the Old Time Bulldozing Scheme but is not Glad of It.

HODGENVILLE, Ky., Aug. 27, '94.
To THE HARTFORD REPUBLICAN.—John W. Lewis spoke here to-day to a large and enthusiastic audience. Although the meeting had only been arranged on Friday and had but little time for publicity, yet there was a big crowd and they were of the most substantial citizens of the county.

Montgomery's henchmen informed him of the speaking by telegram and requested him to come over, which he did, and asked for a division of time, which was refused on personal grounds, but the gentleman displayed the old Democratic bulldozing tactics and declared he would speak and after Mr. Lewis was done he did speak to a crowd of 35, and one to have been just out side of the Court House would have thought that the entire Democratic party of the Fourth District was in there.

Mr. Montgomery has certainly lost all honor or he is in the ditch. His own appointments fail to bring out the people, because his speeches are on a par with his record as a Congressman, and the people don't want to hear him, and if he makes them on any other line they won't believe him, because he publicly proclaimed before the people of Hardin county that before he would vote for the tariff bill he would suffer both arms torn from his body. And in less than one week he voted for the measure. It is no wonder that the people don't want to hear him.

When the people have lived two years longer and have paid out two hundred and ten millions of dollars to the Havesnayer-Sugar trust, they will have less use for Montgomery than they have now.

Free wool has cost the farmers of Kentucky two hundred and sixty-four thousand dollars this year and has reduced the price of sheep from $4 to $1.75 per head and will finally result in the extermination of one half of the sheep in America.

The promised free trade sent down the manufactures of this country and has thrown two and a half millions of people out of employment. Killed the commerce of the country, filled the land with tramps, caused strikes and riots, such as the world has never seen before, is incentive to anarchy, the cause of hunger and idleness, all brought about by demagogues who succeeded in making the people believe that the Republican party was a set of robbers and thieves and were robbing the people.

It is no wonder the people do not want to hear Montgomery.

Wednesday a week ago A. M. Miles and wife, of Fordsville, caused a disgraceful disturbance in the school at that place by attacking the teacher, Prof. Stum, and one of the trustees, a Mr. Brown. So let the guilty be punished.

During the camp meeting at Sulphur Springs, the Rev. U. S. Tabor's bible was misplaced. Bro. Tabor seemed to labor under the idea it had been stolen. He made the statement known to his sister who apparently is a very devoted Christian, claiming sanctification. His sister, who is a married lady, was heard to say that her brother left his bible in care of a certain young minister, and was also heard to intimate that this young clergyman stole her brother's Bible. The writer being personally interested wishes to announce that the report is entirely groundless. He further wishes to make known to the public that the lost or stolen Bible was not left in his care but was in care of another party. I write this little notice because I feel divinely impressed. I would further add that people starting such slanderous reports should know whereof they speak. I would not have noticed this little report had it not been flying all over the community. I want to add a word of exhortation. This sister will please remember that if any class of people need bearing up by the Christians it is a young minister. May the party or parties who started this report, which is without any evidence of truth, go down upon their knees before Almighty God and confess unto him and He will abundantly pardon.

CABS IN THIS COUNTRY.

Women Patronizing the Hansons Not Particular About the Quality.

Two-wheelers have come into their own again, and the hosts of women who drop up to town for a day's shopping this weather are generous patrons of the hansom cab, says the New York Sun. It is a pity, however, that they are not more generally employed by men. Women are less fastidious in matters of physical comfort and are careless about exacting the use of rubber tires. In London no cabby could earn his salt who rattled and banged a fare over the stones the way they do in New York. Even the shabbiest public vehicle on Piccadilly or the Strand has rubber ringed wheels, while it is a difficult task to find one in the long line of carriages fringing Madison and Union squares.

When the manager of one of the big cab companies was questioned about this fact he said the expense involved made it impracticable.

"It costs," he continued, "from seventy-five to one hundred dollars to put rubber tires on a four-wheeler, while the extra circumference allowed for two wheelers costs up to something like fifty to sixty dollars. And only with the most careful driving can these tires be made to last over a year and a half. Reckless Jehus, who steer public cabs, think nothing of running their wheels sideways against sharp street car rails that cut the rubber like a knife."

"It is discouraging," the manager added, "to try to improve cab service in New York. Women are the most generous patrons of hotel up-town conveyances, and they seem to lack all sense of selection in the matter. If two hansons stand side by side, the one drawn by a feeble-looking beast and every bolt rattling will stand equal chances with a smooth running cab, having a sleek lining in the shafts. Of course, if New Yorkers want rubber tires they can have them," he concluded, "but you must remember Englishmen know a lot more about comfort than Americans, and won't be put off or fooled even in the smallest details."

MARRYING IS A PANIC.

One of the Follies into Which Girls Have Fallen.

In the early part of her girlhood a woman is apt to think all she has to do is to wait and amuse herself in the interval; that the future holds the fairy prince who is sure to present himself sooner or later, and that he will be all that she would have him be. She has made up her mind what he is to be like, and what must be his various qualities, and she even chooses mentally the color of his eyes and his general appearance. She is so sure of her future, and that the "right man" will finally put in an appearance, that she gives little or no thought to present suitors, and remains "in maiden meditation fancy free" until suddenly she realizes the awful fact that the years are passing, and that her "chances" are becoming lessened, and that the fairy prince is a mirage after all. It is then that the average woman will, in nine cases out of ten, take the first available candidate that offers, rather than remain unmarried. Her family expects her to marry; she is brought up to no occupation; what the world will say she has been accustomed to consider all-important. So rather than run the chances of remaining single, she elects to unite herself for better or for worse to some comparative stranger, who may be utterly uncongenial, the match being simply the result of a panic.—N. Y. Tribune.

Dainties for the Sick.

In providing dainties for sick people it should be remembered that sweet things are seldom as tempting to the sick as they would be if the person were in health. Tart sweets, such as crab-apple jelly or current jelly, are generally acceptable, but strawberry preserves or jelly will sicken. They belong to the cloying sweets. As a general thing juicy things taste best to the convalescent. Weak bouillon, rather salt, or a bit of nice, sweet ham, with some butter toast tasting of the salty butter, a soft-boiled egg well salted, a slice of bacon with dry toast—all these will be eaten by a sick person who would not want to touch them if well. One primo requisite in entering to sick people is to be neat about it, and serve things daintily.—Medical News.

The Last Dollar for a Dog.

I heard this week of a family who had about reached its last dollar, and when that was spent would not know whence to draw another. It was only one out of a hundred similar cases which the hard times had brought to light, but it had a feature wholly its own. So depressed and miserable were these people, accustomed to a better condition of affairs, but latterly on their uppers, that they went forth and bought a dog! As one of them said, with morbid pathos, "We were so unhappy."—Boston Herald.

A Teachers' Meeting.

The Teachers of the Rosine Magisterial District met at Rosine, August 25, 1894, and owing to the lateness of the arrival of some of the teachers the Association did not begin work until in the afternoon.

At 1 p. m. the house was called to order by the Vice President.

The Secretary then called the roll, showing the absence of several members.

D. H. Godsey being absent, "The Object of Teachers' Meeting" was assigned to J. N. Likens. He thinks the chief object of the meeting is to become familiar with the different plans of teaching. Superintendent Z. H. Shultz being present gave an interesting talk on the same subject. He thinks the regular attendance of the teachers denotes an object other than a pecuniary one.

"Why Teachers Fail" was discussed by G. W. Miller and others. Mr. Miller says there is a lack of a thorough knowledge of the subjects to be taught and the teacher does not understand the disposition of the pupil. Mr. John Barnard thinks one reason why teachers fail is they are not punctual. He thinks the teacher should practice a loving disposition toward each pupil. W. M. Likens thinks the teacher should always study the lessons assigned the pupil. John B. Taylor says the reason teachers fail is a lack of consecration to their work.

Mr. John B. Taylor then gave an interesting talk on "The Reading Circle."

The subject of "Percentage" was opened by W. T. Sanders. H. C. Crowler says he never has his students to study the rules.

"Diacritical Marks"—W. M. Likens and John C. Barnard. Mr. Barnard begins with his primary class to teach diacritical marks.

An essay on "The Teachers' Duty" was next read by Mollie Tunstall.

"Primary Reading" was introduced by Miss Susan Monroe, who gave an interesting talk.

A motion was then made and seconded to elect John B. Taylor Teacher of the Reading Circle. He was duly elected.

During an intermission for recess the books were distributed among the members of the State Reading Circle. A vote was taken to hold the next meeting at Mt. Olivet.

The following program was then arranged: Meeting to be called to order at 9 a. m.

Welcome Address—W. M. Likens. Response—H. C. Crowder.

School management to page 48, by class.

NOON.

Recitation by pupil from Wm. Likens' school.

School Grading—R. A. Byers, Miss Alice Plummer and G. W. Miller.

Folk Lore to page 700, by class.

Paper—Miss Susie Monroe and J. N. Likens.

General Business of Association—by the Committee.

The Association adjourned at 4 o'clock to meet at Mt. Olivet, Sept. 15, 1894.

The Chinese Laundry Ticket.

Probably not one person in a thousand understands the true interpretation of the Chinese laundry ticket. The Celestials have a system of their own. It is based on the many gods and goddesses of the laundry. Although the system is a very complicated one seldom does a Chinese laundryman deliver a package of washing to the wrong person. Furthermore, if the ticket is lost the chances are that you will not get your linen, unless you be a particular friend of the proprietor. Instances are on record where an American has gone to court to force the Chinese to yield up the washing, but the judge was not convinced that the case of the white man was a good one.

The Chinese laundryman at the beginning of each week makes out a batch of checks, in duplicate, to be used as wash tickets. He selects the name of some god or goddess, or of some object, as the sun, the moon or the stars. To this name he prefixes a number, as "Moon, No. 1," "Moon, No. 2," and so on. In the space between the two legends—for the signs are repeated twice—he has his own name, as, for instance, "Wah Lee."

When a customer takes a bundle of washing to the laundry the Chinese first tearing a ticket in two in a ragged fashion, puts one-half on the packet for reference, the other half he gives as a receipt to the person who has brought the package of laundry. It must be presented when the laundry is demanded, and no fours need be entertained that the package of clean clothes will not be forthcoming, for the Chinese are scrupulously exact in these matters, and seldom or never make mistakes. —Ladies' Home Journal.

LEBANON.

What the Eastern Counties of the District will do for Lewis in November.

Mr. Montgomery Sized up in Good Style and his Weakness Pointed Out.

AN INTERESTING COMMUNICATION.

LEBANON, Ky., Aug. 27, '94.

As the official organ of the Republican party, I address you, asking you to lay before the Republicans of the district, through your columns, something of the campaign on which our candidate for Congress, Hon. John W. Lewis, has so hopefully entered.

Mr. Lewis has thus far spoken in the counties of Washington, Nelson, Taylor, Green and Bullitt, and has been greeted by large crowds wherever he has spoken. In his old home at Greensburg where he was raised he had such a magnificent ovation tendered him as was never before seen in the Pennyrite District.

Green county will give him a good majority, Taylor will do likewise and unless all signs fail he will carry this, Marion county, by a small majority and Washington is sure to give him a rousing majority. Thus you see this end of the district will do its duty. In Congressional elections the normal Democratic majority in Marion county is about four hundred. In a year like this one, of devastation and ruin, resulting from Democratic incompetency and legislation, in a year when all men are crying out, "What shall we do to be saved," it would hardly be considered a herculean task to wipe out that majority. Coupled with the foregoing is the fact that great opposition to Mr. Montgomery exists in this county. Never very strong with our people, he has succeeded in the distribution of patronage in weakening himself in the county, in a manner certainly wholly unlooked for by him. Particularly is this so of the Lebanon precinct, which polls about one third of the votes of the county.

This was shown by the overwhelming majority given Mr. Murray, a man totally unknown to our people, in the Lebanon precinct over Mr. Montgomery in the primary, when he, Mr. Montgomery was personally known to every man in the precinct.

The mule trade brings thousands of dollars each year to Marion county. The destruction of the sugar interest in Louisiana means the ruin of the mule trade in this county. The repeal of the two cents bounty and the substitution of the 40 per cent ad valorem duty means higher sugar to the consumer and less to the producer, and fifteen dollars per head less for mules. This state of facts is charged up against Mr. Montgomery also, and he will not receive a vote of a mule dealer or of a mule dealer's friend in Marion county.

Thus far in the campaign Mr. Lewis has confined himself to the tariff entirely. It is a business condition, and not a theory which confronts us, the district and the country, and he has addressed himself to that. Notwithstanding that heretofore the discussion of economics and politics has been considered dry and tedious, the evils of the hour have clothed them with the interest to the common people not before felt. It may well be said in addition that the commanding eloquence of Mr. Lewis, his earnest, plain and pleasing presentation of the question, gains him large crowds and ready listeners. He is making a magnificent canvass and in the near future he will be in Ohio, Breckenridge and the counties in the lower end of the district, where I bespeak for him, judging only from my limited acquaintance in your section, as large audiences as have greeted him elsewhere.

As special judge, Mr. Lewis has for weeks at a time, adorned the bench of our judicial circuit. As a member of the Constitutional Convention he was the peer of any man on the floor, though by a decision as infamous as it was wholly unsupported by law, he was finally denied his seat to which he was elected.

He is an accomplished lawyer and advocate by thorough education and large experience, and a scholarly gentleman.

He should be elected, and if Republicans do their duty he will be.
